RCFV is primarily a tool for viewing text files with the option of using regular expression filters to selectively view parts of such files. However, RCFV also allows you to select files from data stores using regular expression filters. You can search a folder, just its immediate subfolders, or optionally, all subfolders, for matching files in a much more powerful manner than standard Windows wildcards.

For example, you can search a drive for the set of files with any of a set of certain extensions such as image files which end with “.jpg” or “.png”, etc. If needed you could also include any number of other image file or other non-text file extensions or any other patterns in the file name that you are interested in.

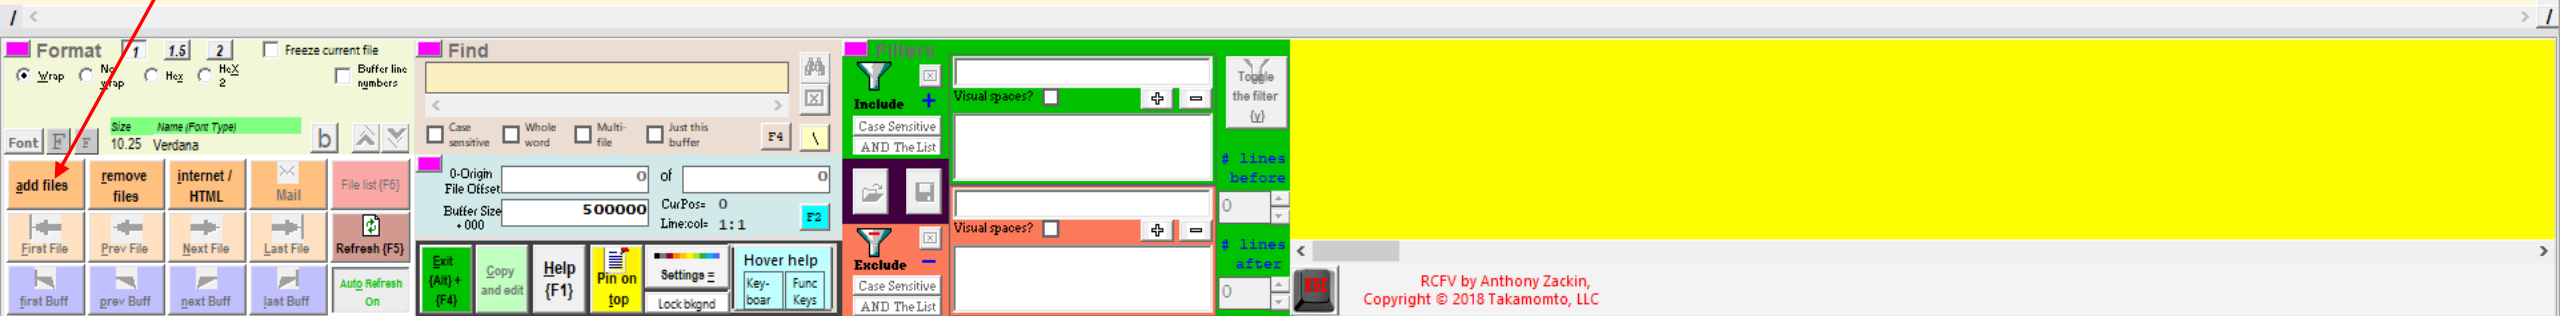

In general, RCFV is useful for reading non-text files in two ways. One, you can use it to view such files in hexadecimal format and, two, you can use the File List window to copy, move, or delete the selected files (without actually having to view them). However, there is one other useful feature when dealing with these files and that is the ability to create a single, “directory” file containing the full path and file name of all the matching files in lieu of actually reading the files’ content. You can then export that text to other programs which can make better use of that file list. And, in the case of image files, you can also render them in your browser as we will see below.

Right clicking the add file button produces the Bulk file selection dialog window. This window is used for specifying the starting folder for a search plus a file name, or a folder with optional text and wildcards. A folder browse window is provided to quickly select this folder.

In this case we want to access all files in the folder C:\Dropbox\RCFV\Downloads which have an extension of jpg or png.

This dialog window gives you the option of selecting the top level folder for the file search.

This window is used for specifying the starting folder for a search plus a file name, or a folder with optional text and wildcards. Even more useful, though, is the use of `\\` to delimit the path to search, from a regular expression which will be used to select matching files.

We have specified our top-level folder, C:\Dropbox\RCFV\Downloads, in which we want to begin the search. We want to find all files in this folder and any contained folders which have an extension of jpg or png.

Since we have selected non-text files we are prompted to create a single file containing the full path and file name for each. This is typically what you want to do with non-text files.

The files in the path list can be ordered in a number of ways. Typically, they will be ordered by either file name (including path) or, particularly for image files, by date taken. The latter defaults to the file creation date if the date taken information doesn't exist.

In this case we will select option 1 to display the files in path+filename order.

Select option 6 to create an RCFV file for each file matching the regular expression. This is only useful for non-text files if you want to view the files in hexadecimal format or if you want to be able to move, copy, or delete selected files from the full set of matching files.

We've pressed the C key, {Shift}+{c}, to open the Copy and Edit dialog window. (We could also have used the context menu.) Options 1 and 3 are useful to export the file list to external programs for additional processing.

Option 2 is where RCFV provides some level of image support. You can display image files or image urls graphically in your browser with this option. In fact, as you will see below, RCFV can also resize the images to be either smaller or larger (with a possible loss of resolution) or to be constrained within the specified pixel limit.

Here are the images specified in the path list above. We've skipped a few steps just to show what one format of the output can look like in your browser.

We will go into more detail in a subsequent example.

The Really Cool FiTeR Viewer

As shown above you can use RCFV to resize and combine multiple images into a “tableau” using your browser as the rendering agent. You can then copy that set of images into other programs such as email to send them to others or a word processor or any other image-friendly software. You can also use the browser’s Print option to create a PDF file.

Whereas before, we gathered images from across multiple folders, it is more often the case that we have a folder containing a set of images that we want to resize and display. We will show, below, an example of that and the various output formats that RCFV provides.

You can drag a folder name or one or more highlighted files to the viewer. (Copy and paste works too, of course.)

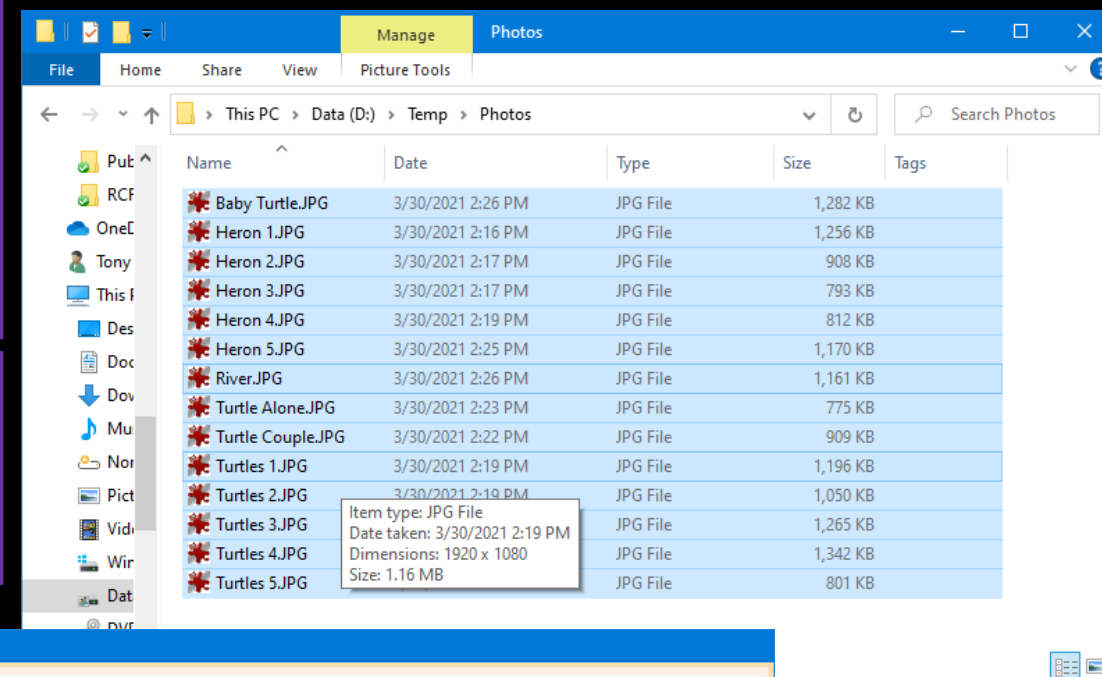

Here is a folder containing a number of images that we want to resize and combine to send to our friends.

Since at least some of the files (in this case, all) are non-text you are prompted to create a single path list file containing each of the file paths and names instead of actually including the contents of each file in a separate RCFV file.

Note: you can force this query when selecting just text files by setting an option in the General tab of the Settings screen.

We will choose option 3 to create a single RCFV file containing the full path name of all the files ordered by the Date Taken metadata in the image (or the file creation date if the date taken information is unavailable).

Create a full path list for the selected files?

Here are the file names in Date Taken order. Since we want to render them in our browser we will press {Shift}+{c} to open the Copy and Edit dialog.

We will choose option 2 to allow our browser to render the images. Note that normally the browser will just render the text in the viewer as is. The exceptions are image urls and image files which will get rendered graphically.

If the text to be rendered by the browser contains images – and in this case it is only images – we are prompted for the sizing parameters.

Image Sizing

Enter the [minimum,]maximum image height for images. Allowable values must be between 50 and 9999 inclusive. Explicitly sized images will be constrained to these values. Unsized images will use the maximum height value. To force a specific height use the same value for both the minimum and maximum.

Examples: ~~300~~ or ~~100,450~~ or ~~250,250~~

- (2) You can stack them vertically without a caption.
- (3) You can display the images horizontally in the browser window. This is the most space efficient display and is particularly useful for smaller images. Check out the display of the png images in the previous example above.

We just saw some ways to display and resize images from local files. We showed how you can create a list of files via a brute force folder search or just by selecting a set of files in a given folder. Then, given a list of image files, we can very easily display them in a browser window.

You can extract multiple image urls from web pages and then download the images. But we can also use Copy and Edit, as before, to resize and display images in a browser window which have been retrieved from the web.

- We will demonstrate this using an artist's web site:

HTTPS://ARTCGALLERY.COM/collections/harry-c-tabak

- We'll use the explicit links option so we can easily filter the urls we want

We will ensure that each url contained in the web page will be on a separate line.

Web Page Options

HTTPS://ARTCGALLERY.COM/collections/harry-c-tabak

Link type

☐ Standard ☒ Explicit

☐ Hidden ☒ Links always start on a new line

Choose "Explicit" if you want to filter on the value of the links. This will cause the link text to be visible as part of the text and preceded by '::'.

☒ Append all additional pages of this query to the new RCFV file

Maximum # pages to read. (0 = no limit)

You can choose to read a multipage url into a single file or to read each page into a separate file. Set the maximum number of pages to read to limit the number. Note that you can press the cancel button during the read to stop processing at the end of the latest query.

☐ Append any subsequent url files in this request to the current file

If you select multiple urls to be read in one request (via dragging text containing 2 or more urls to the viewer or by highlighting 2 or more urls in the viewer and choosing to read all the urls in the selection from the context menu) you can have them read into one viewer file by checking this option.

☒ Automatically coalesce blank lines

☐ Skip frames (may speed processing)

☐ Ignore emphasis tags (bold, italics, etc.)

☒ Display a border for borderless tables

☐ Show hidden text (may be displayed automatically)

☐ Don't display hidden text message delimiters

☒ Include placeholders/urls for images

☐ Fix up run-on text

☐ Include unnamed/multimedia links using a possibly abbreviated url as the name

Maximum text width (0 = no limit)  Use a non-zero value to reformat the text such that most lines will be no longer than the specified size. Using zero plus word-wrap gives you more formatting flexibility.

Maximum number of table columns  Note that any columns beyond this number will be stacked vertically in the rightmost column (minimum = 1).

Maximum table column width (minimum = 20)  This is used to limit the size of each table column. This is also used for blockquotes when the maximum text width = 0.

List spacing

☒ Single

☐ Double

☐ Compress

C:\Dropbox\RCFV\Downloads\harry-c-tabak

Note that we are opening this web page with explicit urls since we want to select the images based on text contained in the url values.

..... HARRY C TABAK - Recent and older works .....

Tabak's early work reflects his bond to nature through his landscape paintings. Social commentary followed with an emphasis on environmental issues for nearly two decades. These works were the subject of numerous exhibitions at the Dorsky Galleries in NYC (80's) and museums. The Wichita Art Museum sponsored a traveling exhibition titled "The Radwaste and Stonehenge Books" a series of sculptural 'books' in a collaboration with artist Nava Atlas. The series then traveled to several other museums sponsored by the Art Gallery at SUNY New Paltz (now the Dorsky Museum).

Tabak began to explore sculpture as a medium in 2001 utilizing found natural materials. These became the basis for his current experiments often describes as 'three dimensional drawings'. These are compositions utilizing wood, stone, glass, discarded broken materials, as well as metallic objects.

Here is the unfiltered text of the artist's webpage displaying explicit links, each on its own line.

We've added a term to the filter so we will match lines containing hyperlinks AND those containing the word grande.

Of course, we could also have used a single include filter, `^::\s.*grande` in this particular case. The AND option is especially useful when there are 3 or more terms.

Finally, we have added a couple of exclude filters to remove the urls that we don't want, viz., those containing the terms _copy_ and _thumb_.

We could now select all the urls above and download them using RCFV as we have done previously.

If you wanted to, you could open them in the default browser, but you could do that directly in the browser so there is little need to use RCFV for that.

When using [Copy and Edit] with text containing images RCFV gives you the ability to display most images with a specific or maximum height. To maintain the original aspect ratio, you can only specify values for the height. Since none of the images on this page contain any explicit sizing parameters the height for all of them will be forced to 450 pixels.

Image Sizing

Enter the [minimum,]maximum image height for images. Allowable values must be between 50 and 9999 inclusive. Explicitly sized images will be constrained to these values. Unsized images will use the maximum height value. To force a specific height use the same value for both the minimum and maximum.

Examples: 300 or 100,450 or 250,250

450

Enter

Enter text in the input box and then press the (Enter) key to return the value.
You can also click on the 'Enter' button to return the entered value.

Here are the images in the browser using the default height value of 450 pixels. On they left they are reduced in size to 25% of normal to show the whole display. On the right they are displayed at 100%.

Image Sizing

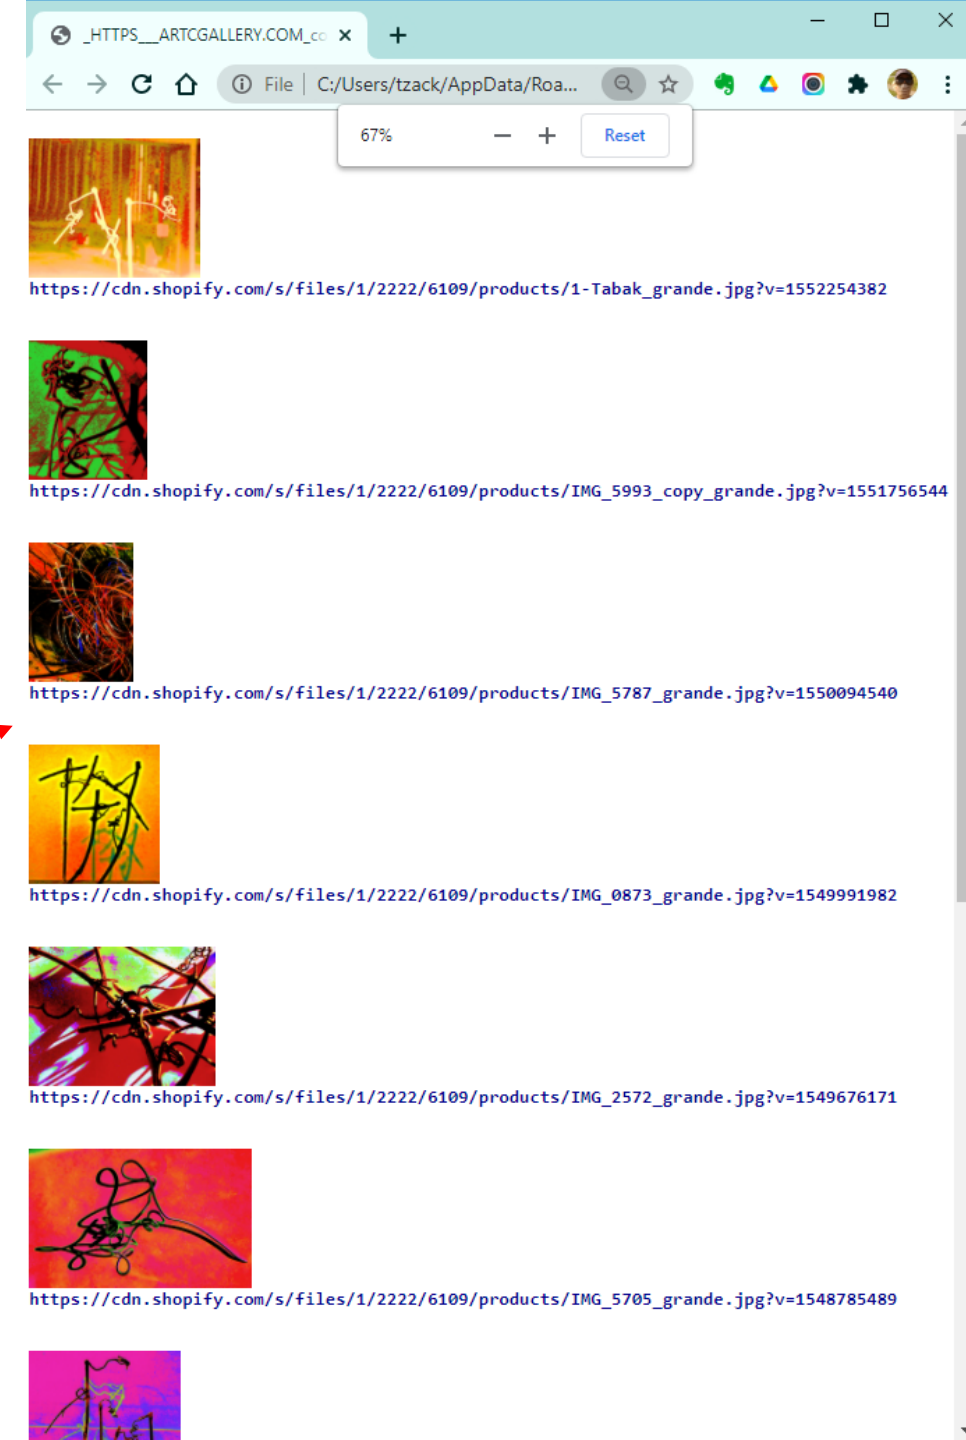

Enter the [minimum,]maximum image height for images. Allowable values must be between 50 and 9999 inclusive. Explicitly sized images will be constrained to these values. Unsized images will use the maximum height value. To force a specific height use the same value for both the minimum and maximum.

Here we've picked a smaller height for the images. To the right is the browser output at 67% magnification showing the images with captions.

We can then copy them into a different program for saving or printing, or to an email to send to others.

Here are the images using a height of 450 pixels stacked horizontally with no caption and no newline characters.

We've copied the images from the browser to an email. We want to send a sample of the artist's work without any of the associated text.

In the last example we will show you something that many may have always wanted and that is a way to see “celebrity weight loss” and other pictures of this ilk without having to click through 40 or more screens filled with ads.

We wanted to see what Chrissy Metz looks like after losing some weight. Unfortunately, she was very near the end of the slide show and we had to do a lot of clicking to get to her.

We will show you how you can let RCFV do the work for you plus how you can select the images with or without the accompanying text and include all the desired data in a single document which you can save or send to others.

Here is the initial url we will be reading (followed by all the associated additional pages):

<https://newsharper.com/trending/celebrity-weight-loss-want-to-know-their-secrets-chrissy-metz>

Web Page Options

<https://newsharper.com/trending/celebrity-weight-loss-want-to-know-their-secrets-chrissy-metz>

Link type

☒ Standard ☐ Explicit ☐ Hidden ☒ Links always start on a new line

Choose "Explicit" if you want to filter on the value of the links. This will cause the link text to be visible as part of the text and preceded by '::'.

☒ Append all additional pages of this query to the new RCFV file

Maximum # pages to read. (0 = no limit)

You can choose to read a multipage url into a single file or to read each page into a separate file. Set the maximum number of pages to read to limit the number. Note that you can press the cancel button during the read to stop processing at the end of the latest query.

☐ Append any subsequent url files in this request to the current file

If you select multiple urls to be read in one request (via dragging text containing 2 or more urls to the viewer or by highlighting 2 or more urls in the viewer and choosing to read all the urls in the selection from the context menu) you can have them read into one viewer file by checking this option.

☒ Automatically coalesce blank lines

☐ Skip frames (may speed processing)

☐ Ignore emphasis tags (bold, italics, etc.)

☒ Display a border for borderless tables

☐ Show hidden text (may be displayed automatically)

☐ Don't display hidden text message delimiters

☒ Include placeholders/urls for images

☐ Fix up run-on text

☐ Include unnamed/multimedia links using a possibly abbreviated url as the name

Maximum text width (0 = no limit)

0

Use a non-zero value to reformat the text such that most lines will be no longer than the specified size. Using zero plus word-wrap gives you more formatting flexibility.

Maximum number of table columns

1

Note that any columns beyond this number will be stacked vertically in the rightmost column (minimum = 1).

Maximum table column width (minimum = 20)

40

Here is the url we will start with. Since we are interested in the associated images we must ensure that they are included with the text.

Note that we are not limiting the number of subsequent pages to read since we don't know how many there are.

Be aware that you may have to monitor this because many of these sites want to keep you going and will "link" the last page of one topic to the first of another. RCFV tries to determine the end of a related set of pages but may not always identify this correctly.

+ Kevin James was never one to make the topic of his weight be an issue, and oftentimes he'd even go as far as incorporating his overweight figure in his comedy. However, as an actor, he'd sometimes be required to make physical alteration to better suit the roles he takes on. Thus when he showed up 80 pounds lighter following the filming and release of his movie Here Comes The Boom, the public was pleasantly surprised to see Kevin in a much slimmer figure. Safe to say The King Of Queens star looks unrecognizable! In a good way, of course.

+ In recent years, Khloe Kardashian has been rather active in changing her physique. It is relatively easy to follow a weight loss regime when you view fitness as a form of therapy, as Khloe would later admit on stylecraze.com. The Reality Television Star's utmost goal was to gain more strength rather than to set a particular amount of weight to lose. Her dairy-free, low calorie diet contributed greatly to her new figure, on top of her daily workout routine. Over the years, Khloe has shown us time and time again that it's all about her own desire to change. Truly motivational.

+ Keely Shaye Smith, the lucky woman who is married to actor Pierce Brosnan - is also extremely famous for being a former model and a talented actress. Being a proper "Bond Girl," she decided to start on a new diet and workout routine which resulted in a staggering 100 pounds shed. She was always stunning and is even more beautiful now. That's why he's still madly in love with her probably, and in 2018, the couple celebrated their 25th anniversary. Reportedly, it was Keely who helped him cope with his first daughter's death in 2013.

The Really Cool FiTeR Viewer

© 2018 – 2021 Takamomto, LLC

In this tutorial we have shown how one can use RCFV to easily select, resize, and display images, with or without additional text, in conjunction with the default browser. We have used Chrome for our examples but other Windows' browsers should act similarly.

We showed how to use regular expressions to select specific image files within a set of folders and then easily display them in a browser window in a number of formats.

We showed how to display web page images similarly in a browser window.

We showed how using the multipage access ability of RCFV to extract images from multiple related web pages allowed the automation of image display which otherwise would require a large amount of user interaction.

And, taking advantage of the browser Print command, we showed how simple it is to create a pdf file containing the selected images and/or text.
